City of Vienna Designated as a PlanFirst Community for 3rd Time

The City of Vienna was recently honored by Commissioner Christopher Nunn with the Georgia Department of Community Affairs on its re-designation as a 2021 PlanFirst Community.

PlanFirst is a 3-year program that recognizes and rewards communities that clearly demonstrate an established pattern of successfully implementing their Local Comprehensive Plan. Designated communities are eligible for technical assistance, as well as bonus points and enhanced eligibility for certain DCA funding opportunities. Vienna first received the designation in 2015, was re-designated in 2018, and now again for the 2021-2023 years.

Tyler P. Reinagel, Director of the Office of Planning and Research said, “Your re-designation recognizes your continued hard work and successful comprehensive plan implementation and acknowledges your community’s commitment to identifying opportunities and setting the goals to move your community forward. I commend you on the efforts that have led to this designation. The City of Vienna is an example for all Georgia communities in its creation of a robust vision of its future and maintenance of an active strategy for implementing that vision. This is a well-deserved acknowledgement of successful planning and implementation. We look forward to working with you.”

Also attending the presentation were Congressman Sanford Bishop and State Representative Patty Bentley.

Veteran's Day is a federal holiday observed on November 11th in honor of all veterans of the United States armed forces. This special day is normally observed locally with a reception at Vienna City Hall followed by a program at the Dooly County Courthouse honoring and recognizing our veterans. A tree with the name of all Dooly County Veterans is proudly displayed at Vienna City Hall during the month of November. However, due to COVID-19 restrictions these events have been cancelled for this year.

Instead, the Vienna Woman's Club will erect a patriotic-themed tree in the Downtown City Square in honor of our veterans and for all to see. A special edition will run in The News Observer honoring local area women veterans.

Here are some interesting things about Veterans Day that you may or may not know.

- A traditional observation is a moment of silence at 11 AM remembering those who fought for peace. (Commemorates the cease-fire in the 1918 armistice which was scheduled for "the eleventh hour of the eleventh day of the eleventh month.")
- The last soldier killed in action in World War I is generally acknowledged to be an American called Henry Gunther from Baltimore. He was killed 60 seconds before the armistice came into force while charging German troops who knew that the Armistice was imminent. It was said that Gunther had been despondent over a recent reduction in rank and was trying to redeem his reputation.
- The day of recognition for Veterans of the Great War (World War I) on this date was first proclaimed by President Wilson on November 11, 1919. In May 1938, the 11th of November in each year was declared a legal holiday and was known as 'Armistice Day'.
- The war which claimed the most American lives was the Civil war, with over 618,000 deaths, compared to 416,000 in World War II.
- In the USA, there are an estimated 20 million veterans. Veterans from the Vietnam War are the largest group at over 7 million. There are 5.2 million veterans who served during the Gulf War Era.
- In 1968, the Uniform Monday Holiday Act initially applied to Veterans Day as well, stipulating that the federal holiday should be observed on the fourth Monday of October. However, veterans groups opposed the change and most states kept their Veterans Day commemorations on November 11th. In 1975, President Gerald Ford signed a law that moved the holiday back to November 11th.

Joiner's Corner

New Words

by Neil Joiner

My friend and neighbor, Dewel Lawrence, recently introduced me to a new word. That's not hard to do as my vocabulary is pretty slim, especially for someone who poses as a columnist. This is at least the second time Dewel gets credit for expanding my personal dictionary. The first word he taught me was cavalry, a term I once knew but had for decades incorrectly substituted with calvary.

I don't remember which column it was, but months ago I mentioned the calvary in one, thinking I was referring to those soldiers on horseback routinely featured in old westerns. Despite watching a fair share of such fare in my youth, I had been using the wrong word for ages. I've seldom had reason to say, write, or even think about the word cavalry, which helps explain how my error went unnoticed for so long.

In the unlikely case there is someone reading this who has made that same mistake, here's the gist of it. Calvary is the place where Jesus died on the cross. Cavalry refers to soldiers. Both are pertinent to the rescue business but there are substantial differences. The cavalry's relief is temporary and for specific situations and people. They are one of many avenues for physical deliverance. Calvary, on the other hand, paved the way for spiritual deliverance. It offers the path for eternal salvation and is available for all who will accept it.

When I say my vocabulary is limited, I'm not being modest. The Vice-President of the proof department at Joiner's Corner returned a draft to me not long ago for a column I was working on. Penned in red ink across the top was a note, "Congratulations on a new record! You used "it" 17 times and "its" twice." She had underlined the numbers showing a total of 19, and graciously added a big smiley face on the side. Not many proof departments add smiley faces and sometimes a heart.

The late Murphy Head deserves credit for teaching me an interesting word years ago. Murphy, who was affectionately called the walking man's friend, sold used vehicles and all sorts of home furnishings. Nobody ever left his place on foot if he could help it. When he stopped by my office at the bank one day, I politely inquired, "How's it going, Murph?"

"Everything's copasetic," he said with his usual grin. I had never heard the term copasetic before, so Murphy explained it meant okay, lovely, or jam up and jelly tight. It's odd how little moments like that stay with us and sometimes become an ongoing part of our conversations. For years afterward Murphy would ask me if everything was copasetic, or I'd ask him the same. That one word gave us a thousand laughs and I just added another to the count.

The new word which Dewel shared with me in September is discommoded. His casual inclusion of discommoded in an email seemed a ruse to slyly introduce a made-up word. But Dewel works a lot of crossword puzzles, so I knew it was possibly something he'd stumbled across or found going down. Discommoded, I reasoned, must be the opposite of commoded, which is obviously something a nurse and doctor might discuss in a hospital setting. "Nurse, do you know if Mr. Lawrence in room 308 has been commoded?"

"Yes, doctor. He was commoded just before the shift change for the third straight day. The second shift discommoded him and several of the staff are threatening to quit if it happens again."

My conjecture seemed logical, but I also checked with Google. Discommoded reportedly means "to cause (someone) trouble or inconvenience." The example sentence provided was, "I am sorry to have discommoded you." Apparently, that can be said by either the patient or the nurse.

I don't expect to embrace discommoded as heartily as I have copasetic. I am, however, now mildly inspired to expand my vocabulary and have set a goal of learning one new word per month. I considered a weekly challenge but decided the stress might cause me to feel more discommoded than copasetic.
